Message from the President

The Convention is here! If you like Heisey glass Newark, Ohio is the place to be in June. There will be more beautiful Heisey glass than you could imagine. From the mini-show at AppleTree Auction on Wednesday morning, the auction at Apple Tree Auction House Wednesday afternoon, to the Elegant Glass Show at the Gibbs Ice Arena on Thursday, Friday and Saturday to the Flea "off-the-square" Saturday morning and even the Heisey Museum Shop. I'm sure everyone will be able to find something they can't live without! I hope to find some items I have been looking for, for a very long time!

HCA is in search of some dedicated people to take on a few tasks:

The HCA BOD is looking for a study club or an individual to sponsor the 2018 Percy & Vivian Moore Weekend. This event has been held in many places throughout the country in the past. There could be a special place or event you would like to share with your fellow glass collectors in conjunction with other events for this weekend. It could be in your hometown or another location. It could be a destination event! There are folks who can assist, give advice or help plan this event. If you or your club would be interested in hosting this high profile and exciting weekend please contact me, the Museum or Jack Burriss and we can help you get the ball rolling. It is not too early to start planning! Thank you for your support!!

HCA is also looking for a dedicated person to help with the Spring Benefit and Fall Select Auctions. This person would work with the Auction Manager to recruit volunteers, check in consigned and donated glass, arrange for the hall rental and setup, as well as, determine cataloging and auction dates. This is a high profile position working with a wonderful group of volunteers. No experience necessary! We will train you! Please apply as soon as possible.

And finally we are looking for someone to be the 2018 Convention Chair. Again there is lots of help available to assist in the planning and scheduling for all of next years events. The theme has yet to be decided, but, the person who accepts this position can help with that choice.

These are all exciting positions waiting for someone to put their "spin" on these events. Please let me know how soon we can get you started helping HCA and your fellow collectors.

Happy Heisey Hunting!

Glass ID Session - Show & Tell at Convention

By Walter Ludwig

One of the most popular events at Heisey Convention is the Glass ID Session and Show & Tell. This year, veteran panel members will be anxious to analyze and inform the details of the mysterious and unseen pieces of Heisey glass.

It is time to start thinking about what you will bring to Convention to take advantage of the encyclopedic knowledge this panel possesses. Perhaps you have a piece that the person who sold it to you swore was Heisey, but you have this nagging suspicion that maybe it isn't. Perhaps you have a piece of glass that you know is not Heisey, but you don't know what it is. Remember, many Heisey collectors are knowledgeable about glass from many other companies. Our panel members are no exception. So bring it on, and we can all learn!

And don't forget to bring that special item for Show & Tell: perhaps something rare, or something with an interesting history, or that piece with a good story about how you found it. (We all love those stories!) Be prepared to tell about it.

The Glass ID Session and Show & Tell will occur on Friday June 16, 2017, right after the Annual Meeting. Coffee and donuts will still be available, so come early and stay late!

Words From Your Curator – Director

It is one of the “ BEST “ times of the calendar year, filled with good times, here at your National Heisey Glass Museum! There is new mulch on the flower beds, the air conditioning systems have all been serviced, there are new plantings in the planters, many other improvements in our physical surroundings have been made that not all of you have seen yet, and your staff is very excited to soon be able to welcome you all HOME for the 2017 Convention and Show. Countless hours of preparations have been made by many people to make all of our amusement and enjoyment possible.

The octagon display case in Gallery One is reset to display the actual “ STARS “ of many a Hollywood movie that being the many HEISEY items that steal the scenes (for us at any rate) that they are part of. There are a number of guest appearances throughout our Museum to please and surprise you. Michael will have much more to say about this in his Seminar to be presented in the historic Midland Theater. Who knew that we had so many outstanding actors in our Heisey family? The fun that went into all of this preparation, I am sure will lead to your pleasure.

The vase display featured on our cover this issue has been a “work of Love” by Walter and many others. The presentation of early vases in Gallery 3 and the Seminar that Walter will do on Wednesday will be very informative and impressive. I trust you all shall have time to spend looking over this vast assortment of fine Heisey items to hold flowers. Charlene has once again put together a show of first rate dealers to assist us in parting with money and Dan & Sue have coordinated the always outstanding Display Table area. The vintage Ballroom for our banquet has me thinking about a Tux for part of the glamor of Hollywood, so just putting that out there. I would also like to remind everyone that we need your unusual Heisey item or items to make the ID segment educational and fun for all see Walter’s article on page 3.

On another note I have seen some of the lists submitted for our Fall Select Auction and there are numerous items that will make many of us very pleased and thinking about bidding.

I have a request to share Sally Abrams’ new address - 13180 Doman Road, D214, Pineville, NC 28134; as she is unable to travel and would really enjoy hearing from her delightful Heisey friends.

I know not all of you are able to be here this year for Convention and the Show however I do have the understanding that we are all connected by our LOVE of the BEST table top glass ever made in America, Heisey so the celebration includes all of us !

Looking forward to the FUN of it all!

Yours in thanks,

Please remember your Hospitality Room items to share!

Through the Glass Looking: Heisey's Adventures in Optics Wonderland, Part Seven

Eric Tankesley-Clarke

From their introduction in about 1906 up through 1941, optics continued to develop at A.H. Heisey & Co. For obvious reasons, innovation nearly ceased for the next several years. The war interrupted everything. With so much effort aimed toward defeating the Axis, there was little time, material, or desire to think about new lines of glassware.

After the war, one might think there was a lot of pent-up demand, all those new households springing up everywhere. But tastes had changed. Formal was out; casual was in. Heisey's business had been built on the fashionable table setting. The post-war family didn't see the need for all of that fuss. What was a glass company to do?

Rare post-war optics

One answer was to develop new looks in fewer, simpler pieces. Unfortunately for Heisey, many did not meet with commercial success. There are a number of patterns and decorations that were produced in such small numbers that we can't even be sure whether they were experiments or just failed attempts at grabbing the commercial market. The examples discussed in this installment range from rare to extremely rare. All the optics are blown ones; Heisey had nearly abandoned doing any new pressed optic designs.

In 1949, Heisey took a new approach to an old trick. We've already seen how, in the 1920's and 30's, they tried many spiral optics. How about twisting the stem, too? Twisted stems weren't a new idea, but putting the two together was. That is just what they did with #5071 Fort Hayes. Some examples have an internal spiral optic, just like what we've seen in earlier pieces (fig. 1). This gives the effect of the externally spiraled stem continuing up into the bowl, although it is an illusion. Other Fort Hayes examples have no optic. One Heisey price list mentions a Fort Hayes double martini in "S/O", which normally means Saturn Optic. In this case, however, it probably meant Spiral Optic.

Strictly speaking, Fort Hayes doesn't represent a new optic, but they used an old one in a clever way.

Fig. 1. #5071 Fort Hayes with spiral optic, as shown in the stemware book by Bradley, Ryan, and Ryan.

Heisey did, however, create genuine new optics after the war. One timid attempt, probably dating from about 1950, was an 18-panel blown optic, what we might call blown Narrow Optic (not to be confused with the pressed Narrow Optic from 50 years earlier). This is the exception I mentioned way back in Part Two of this series. As you may recall from then, nearly all blown panel optics made by Heisey had either 10 panels (Wide) or 14 panels (Medium). The 18-panel blown optic was used on #5080 California goblets (fig. 2). The optic is so subtle that it can easily be missed. It certainly proved nearly impossible for me to photograph. But trust me, it's there, and if you squint just so you may be able to make out its faint outlines (fig. 3).

The California goblet is poorly documented and only one set has ever been discovered. All eight of them had a cutting which is undocumented but looks likely to be from the Heisey factory. Whether the goblet, the cutting, or the optic ever went into true production is hard to know. The 18-panel blown narrow optic may have been unique to this pattern. But it might be worth looking over contemporaries such as #5078 Park Avenue, #5079 Pan American, #5082 Mid-Century, #5083 El Rancho, or some of the cocktails and blown barware from the late 1940's and 1950's.

For a more striking optic, we turn to a stem which is well known, but not with this optic and not in this color. The museum owns a #5082 Mid-Century goblet with a Sultana bowl (fig. 4). That's not a color you are going to find every day, and certainly not on Mid-Century. The optic is blown and internal, so nothing unusual there. But the appearance is another matter, an odd Saturn-like optic. The rings are off-kilter and irregular, and even a little bit frayed at the edges. They are spaced more closely, so there are about twice as many as you would expect with regular Saturn optic. The spacing is uneven. Heisey was probably trying for another informal look. In comparison with the Saturn optic, this optic looks disheveled and disorganized. It certainly isn't Saturn—or even Neptune or Uranus. More like Asteroid Belt. Given the color and the pattern, this optic was probably made somewhere around 1951 or 1952.

Another stem which is uncommon in any form occurs either plain or with an optic so subtle as to go almost unnoticed. The stem is #5092 Empress Lily (fig. 5). For a while it was known only by its HCA number, 8028. A factory photograph and a list of items with a cutting document the original pattern number.

Fig. 2. #5080 California goblet.

Fig. 3. #5080 California goblet bowl, faintly showing the 18-panel blown Narrow Optic. The leftmost panel caught the light. Cutting probably an undocumented factory design.

Fig. 4. #5082 Mid-Century goblet, Sultana bowl, with unusual Saturn-like optic.

All crystal examples of Empress Lily I have seen have a plain bowl, no optic. Now recall that Heisey brought back their turquoise color in the 1950's, calling it Limelight. Using Empress Lily for yet more experiments, they made goblets not only with Limelight bowls and crystal stems, but in the reverse, with crystal bowls and Limelight stems. (We can say this is Limelight and not Zircon since the pattern number puts this goblet squarely in the 1950's.)

Some Empress Lily with Limelight bowls were made with Saturn Optic. That's just what you might expect, given that optic's affinity for the turquoise color. But other Empress Lily goblets (Limelight on either bowls or stems) have a subtle, four-sided internal blown optic. The same optic was used on an extremely rare example with a milk-glass stem.

The four lobes of the optic are probably intended to echo the four-sided floral motif of the stem. The optic reminds me of four large petals cupped on the inside of the bowl. Since this optic has only been seen on Empress Lily, it makes some sense to call this the Lily Optic (fig. 6). But only some sense. Four petals aren't appropriate for lilies which are three-parted flowers, but that won't be the only time botanically challenged names have been used for Heisey. Don't get me started.

Empress Lily was made in at least six sizes, including two heights of goblet. The crystal one in the photograph is the low goblet. The Limelight examples I have seen have the same size bowls but are on taller, thinner stems, whether the color was in the bowl or in the stem. All-crystal tall goblets are possible, of course, but I haven't seen them.

Given that Heisey chemist Emmet Olson experimented with white glass formulas in late 1954, when Limelight was also in production, and that this goblet has been seen with a milk-glass stem, I date the Lily Optic to about the same time.

The 1950's saw rare optics on rare pieces. The factory closed in 1957. Can there have been any more optics before that fateful time? Of course, there can. Stay tuned for one final installment in the story of Heisey's half-century-long affair with optics.

Only one more installment to go in the optics series. Soon it will be time to write about other Heisey topics. This whole optic thing started because a reader asked about it. Have a topic you would like to see covered? I can't make guarantees, but you know where to send ideas, don't you? Let me see your name show up in the heiseyglass@gmail.com inbox.

From Your 2017 Convention Chair

Linda Greenwood

S'Wonderful, S'Marvelous, that Convention's almost here. Here I go, bursting into song again. Before it was show tunes, now Gershwin. The time is almost here for us to all be together enjoying friendships, shopping and of course the beautiful Heisey glass. I only have a few items to touch on so this letter will be short and sweet.

First, THANK YOU to the study clubs and individuals who have contacted me regarding their live and silent auction donations. So far I have received word from Heisey Collectors of Texas, North Carolina Club, Northwest Collectors Club, Buckeye Club, Great Plains Club and Jean Will, who will all be donating glass and baskets for the Live and Silent Auctions as well as glass and monetary donations to the HCA and museum. If there are more groups and/or individuals interested in donating, please let me know so we can add to you to our list.

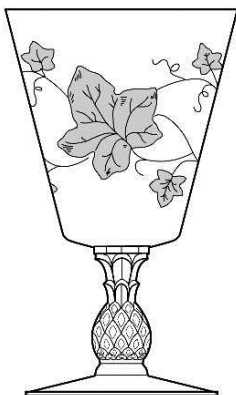

Next, get those registrations in! Time is running out and I hope to see all of you here in June so get those in the mail soon or better yet, contact the Museum directly to register by phone. Don't miss out on our red carpet event.

Lastly, another HUGE THANK YOU to everyone who has reached out to me to offer suggestions, guidance and ideas as well as volunteer their time to help. I am sure I will be calling on many of you as we get closer to time and once convention is here. I can't tell you how I much I appreciate it.

Well, this is all for now. I am counting the days until our "Opening Night". I am so excited and hope you are too. See you in Hollywood, "Heisey in Hollywood" that is.

Regards, Linda

In this 1956 movie "Written on the Wind", Dorothy Malone extends, what looks to be a well needed drink, to infamous actor Rock Hudson. Surely the Plantation Ivy etched stemware can lighten his mood.

Great Plains Heisey Club News

by Kathy Files, Secretary

A lovely May day in Omaha was the scene for our Great Plains Heisey Club meeting at the beautiful home of Marcie and Eric Bergquist. We started with a delicious meal after which President Mock called our meeting to order and thanked our hosts. There were 28 members and 4 guests present.

We thanked Mary and Gregg Cameron and Bev and Bob Heise for their work at the HCA Museum Library in April. Many of our GPHC members also volunteered at the HCA Spring Auction. Gregg Cameron gave a report on HCA Board activities and we thanked Gregg for his recent website work. Minutes of our previous meeting were approved and the Treasurer's report was given. We hope to make a nice donation at the HCA convention in June.

Our club will represent HCA at the National Depression Glass Convention in Wellington, KS in July so we will make that the venue for our next meeting. Ande and Greg Henne will serve as our hosts. Part of the meeting will include discussing our Heisey finds en route or at the NDGA show.

Trudy aka “Martha” presented a “moment” emphasizing the importance of carefully wrapping and carrying our Heisey purchases to prevent accidents. She told of making a great buy and then having the contents crash on the pavement when the plastic sack slipped from her grip as she exited the store. She demonstrated the sickening sound made when glass meets a solid surface. A sad story but a good reminder.

Tom Files presented a program on table size creams and sugars or the “big guys” as he called them. He started with all the various forms of creams or sugars produced by Heisey and then discussed many of the table size ones on display – patterns from the beginning of production to ones still around when they were phased out in the early 1930s. His handout also included a useful field reference by pattern.

Some members had made great purchases at the HCA Spring Auction and other sources so we had a table full of Heisey to show and tell. Some of the items: Empress oval footed comport with elaborate cutting, Empress ice bucket with Tally Ho etching, Yeoman puff box with insert, Plantation cordial, Marshall decanter with Orchid etching, Old Williamsburg footed comport, Half Circle cream & sugar/Moongleam, Navy soda/Cobalt base with two etchings—Short Sailboat & Motor Boat variant, Old Sandwich catsup with stopper, Carcassonne footed ice tea with Houston Post etching, Cut Block/Custard individual cream souvenir of Butte, MT, Puntty Band pickle dish, Fancy Loop cracker jar, Koors jug, and Queen Ann salad dressing bowl with Minuet etching.

We held our usual 50/50 auction which got very spirited and was fun for the all the lucky bidders. Thanks to Jean Will we also had jelly sales to help our treasury.

The raffle winner was one of our guests and he decided to keep all the Heisey in the box. (Now there's a new Heisey collector in Omaha). There were some beautiful Heisey items in the raffle box thanks to Glenn Gall who donated all the great glass. President Mock adjourned our meeting for an array of sweet desserts brought by a number of our club members. A yummy ending for a fun GPHC meeting.
