The President's Discourse
Tom Bischoff

I am sorry to announce Kelly Thran has resigned as Assistant Curator and Editor of our Heisey News. She has been an important part of Heisey Collectors of America, Inc. for many years. We all wish her the best for her future.

Molly Kaspar has been elevated from position of Museum Assistant to that of Assistant Curator carrying with it the duties and position of Editor. She will also continue in her position as overseer of the glass blowing facilities operated at the Institute of Industrial Technology by HCA.

Someone recently told a Board Member, the life of a Board Member can't be too bad because all of the Board Member's travel expenses, etc. are paid for by HCA. Sorry, it isn't so. If you are inclined to run for the Board (and you all should be) expenses come with the territory. We do it for the fun of it; for the betterment of HCA and for the sense of accomplishment. Let a present Board Member know if you too would like the opportunity to serve the greatest glass collecting club in the world!

Mary Ourant and the staff assure me our already beautiful museum will be even more splendid as the end of year holidays approach. The next quarterly meeting and dinner will be December 7, 1996 at the Institute of Industrial Technology in Newark. The meeting will be held immediately after dinner or at approximately 8:30 p.m. A Board Meeting will commence at 9:00 a.m. Saturday at IIT.

The annual Staff-Volunteer Appreciation Luncheon will be December 16. Be sure to say a kind word to the next staff or volunteer person with whom you have contact. We have an extremely hard working and knowledgeable group of whom I am very proud.

Last month I promised an article concerning the granting of permission to members of HCA for the use of the collective membership logo, the Diamond H. Rather than give it to you second hand, I have asked an attorney assisting us to write a brief article. My synopsis is that under proper guidelines, members will be permitted the use on appropriate stationary and business cards of the logo. In reviewing previous issues of the Heisey News, I found various Presidents and Curators gave their own little spin to the use; this also appearing in letters of permission issued by HCA. Look forward to the column next month. ♦

The 1997 HCA Benefit Auction

It's time to begin thinking about the 1997 HCA Auction! The auction will be held April 18 and 19, 1997 at Apple Tree Auction Center, Newark, Ohio. Please refer to the Consignor Packing List and Auction Contract on page 18. More details in the December issue...

Don't forget to make your reservation for the Holiday Dinner on December 7 at IIT. The deadline is December 5!

Attention Members:

The Museum Shop is again in need of Heisey glassware for resale. Why not donate a few pieces of glass to HCA and continue to share your love for Heisey? Contact Mary Ourant, (614) 345-2932 for further details.

Ready or not, the holidays are just around the corner and the National Heisey Glass Museum is gearing up. We have many events planned for the Christmas season and you're invited. In fact, we especially look forward to seeing many of our local members! As always, the museum will be decked out head to toe in holiday trimmings. The staff, joined by volunteers, begins decorating just before Thanksgiving; if you're interested in volunteering for a few hours, please contact Mary Ourant, Administrator. With two buildings and many galleries, you can imagine how long it will take!

Our Heisey Christmas 1996 festivities kick-off with an Open House on Saturday, November 30. The museum will be open, free to the public, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. In past years tradition, the museum will again be holding its Prism Angel Workshop, led by staff member Mary Jo Kochendorfer. Watch and learn how to transform a prism into a beautiful crystal and lace Christmas ornament. If that's not enough, then you may also make Mary Jo's latest creation, a Poinsettia Candleholder. There is a small fee for each craft ($2 to $2.50 a piece); pre-registration is not required.

Family Day and a free Open House are scheduled for Saturday, December 7, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Special family events are planned, in addition to the Prism Angel and Poinsettia Candleholder Workshops. Included are the judging of the HCA 1996 Coloring Contest, children's educational-museum related activities and even a visit from Santa Claus.

This is the second year for the coloring contest—it was so popular last year that we decided to offer it again. Contest entries may be picked up at the museum beginning November 15. Send a business sized SASE to HCA and we will be happy to mail one or more entries to you. Entries must be dropped off or postmarked by December 6, 1996. There are three age groups, 3-5 years, 6-8 years and 9-12 years. A prize valued at $50.00 will be awarded to each age group winner. Last year the contest was judged by Jeri Kornegay, Editor of the Advocate (Newark's local newspaper), who printed an article and photographs of the event for HCA. The judges for this year's contest have not been named yet.

And, if two Saturday Open Houses weren't enough for you, stop by for a third on Saturday, December 14 for our final holiday event. Enjoy extended hours at the museum, 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. This is your last chance for the craft workshops, so mark your calendar. Christmas in the Park, an annual event presented jointly by the museums in Veterans Park—the National Heisey Glass Museum, the Buckingham House and the Sherwood Davidson House—will be held from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m., with free admission to all three museums.

Last year our holiday events were quite successful, and this year we hope for even greater attendance. You have been formally invited to share the holidays with the staff and volunteers at the National Heisey Glass Museum and we look forward to seeing you in December!

Happy Holidays...okay, it's still a little early to say that, but I'm just getting warmed up! ♦

All Together Now—Sing!

Carl Sparacio

"New York, New York, it's a wonderful goblet! You're supposed to sing that sentence to the tune of...oh, forget it.

So began an article I prepared originally for Diamond Dust, the used to be newsletter of The Heisey Heritage Society, the Mid-Atlantic States affiliate of the HCA (and the piece may even have been punched up for the Heisey News). No matter, it occurred to me upon rereading the almost twenty year old piece that it is as up to date today as it was back then and, since research has not turned up additional information, I should offer it again for the vast majority of Heisey collectors who missed these words of wisdom the first time around (that, and in the interest of getting something to the Heisey News before deadline falls). Here goes:

No. 1051 New York is a wonderful goblet because it is an out and out steal from EAPG. If you're like me, it took a long while to figure out what EAPG meant. I'd seen it in ads and articles and become frustrated because I didn't know and I was sure I was missing out on something. I tried pronouncing it as a word but it sounded like I was getting ready to spit up. EAPG translates simple to "Early American Pattern Glass" (perhaps we should schedule a piece on SASE, too).

Heisey's No. 1051 New York is one of many versions of the early American "Honeycomb" pattern. It differs from most other honeycombs only slightly and, unfortunately, from still others hardly at all. Heisey produced this piece around 1900 before the Diamond H was born. It won't be signed so you'll have to count on a couple of distinctive features plus instinct to identify it.

Over the years I've looked at 33,427,623 honeycomb style goblets in an attempt to find just one I could be sure was made by Heisey. So far I've seen two and both were brought to me by collectors for identification. Each time I could not commit myself to a positive identification. You may have heard the hollow thud of a head banging against a wall both times—it's become a fixation. I can't look at a beehive without imagining a stem attached to it.

I don't think I've been to an antiques show or a shop without seeing at least one honeycomb style goblet and, more often than not, there are dozens (remember, this was written twenty years ago). To spare myself hardening of the eyeballs I've developed a list of features to look for to separate Heisey's from the others. I'll share them with you so you can cut down your looking time too.

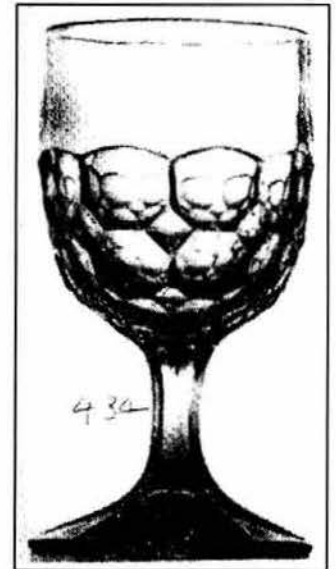

First and most distinctive is the fine line which circles the bowl of the New York goblet—it sits directly on top of the honeycombs and separates the pattern from the top half of the bowl. Right off you will eliminate about 95% of the goblets you find. The remaining 5% may have that line but they won't all be Heisey. We can eliminate most of these by concentrating on the shape of the bowl. New York's bowl is straight sided. After the roundness of its base, the bowl rises straight and true without even a hint of cupping. I have yet to see a honeycomb goblet that flares so we need not concern ourselves with that problem.

If a goblet passes the straight side test you are almost home free—all that remains is proportion and quality. The proportion test is simple, the first clue is the line around the bowl—it will be right smack in the center of the bowl. Not one quarter of the way down or three quarters of the way down but just about dividing the bowl in half. The stem will be the same length as half the bowl. What you have is a goblet divided into three almost equal parts: plain top half of the bowl, honeycombed bottom half of the bowl and the stem not counting the foot.

The final test is quality and that should clinch it for you. The glass in the bowl and stem must be bright and clear and have sharp lines outlining the pattern. The glass in the foot will not appear to be as good a quality as the glass in the rest of the stem. The next time you see a Honey Comb goblet, and you'll see many, just remember Sparacio's Formula: If a line above the pattern bisects a straight sided bowl and you can divide a quality goblet by three you are looking at a No. 1051 New York goblet. If you can't memorize that formula just look in any high school algebra book should the need arise.

No. 1051 New York is listed as being made only in a 10 oz. goblet but I've seen little wine glasses that really shook me up. Have fun looking for this one.

Heavens, it's November already. I'm a little nervous about it. My wife says that I am to be the family turkey this year. Thanksgiving, is also a time to think about putting together Christmas and Chanukah gift lists. I don't want to seem pushy so I won't include my home address here but I will remind you that our Heisey Museum's Endowment Fund should be the third thing on your holiday list—after me and the children.

No kidding, what better way to say thank you to the people who keep the museum going and to show your appreciation to all its volunteers. A holiday check to the Endowment Fund is also a great gift to fellow HCA members. There's no other gift you can give that will include all your Heisey friends as a bonus.

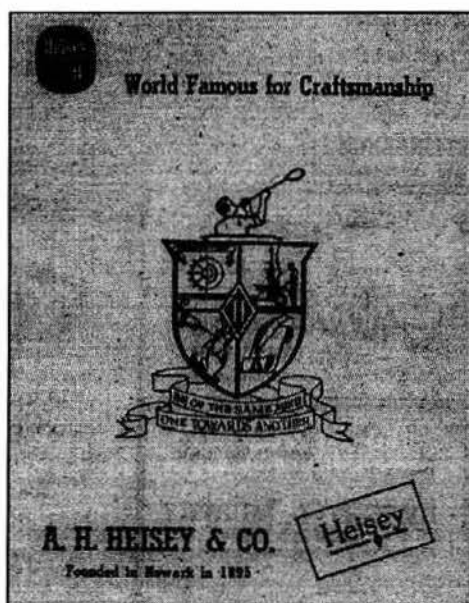

Have a wonderful Thanksgiving! ♦

From The Archives—Mysterious Correspondence

Don Valdes

Last month this column was devoted to deciphering A.H.'s handwriting. Just today I came across a letter that was written so clearly that not a word was in question. I'll share (Thank you for the reminder, Carl).

The folder was labeled "A H Heisey co, Misc correspondence. Within were just two letters. The first, dated June 26, 1895, was a brief note with the letterhead, "R. Patrick & Co., Bankers, Pittsburgh, Pa." It was written quite clearly:

Dear Heisey:

Saw Nesbit this A.M. He is to let me know definitely about both his brothers tomorrow. We have the pitcher for sure although P. A. C. think they have him to a certainty.

Nesbit wants you to go to Oakdale on Monday and practice with his brother.

Will expect to see you very soon.

Resby,

W.E. Patrick

I am confident the "Heisey" in question was E. Wilson and the pitcher was not of the Fandango pattern.

But it is the second letter that was more touching; less mystery, greater interest (I think). The handwriting is clear and steady, particularly, we will see, for a man of eighty. Each line is straight and the letters beautifully formed. Unfortunately, we have but two pages of the original three, the first is missing. We can't know for sure to whom the letter is addressed but I surmise it is to the sergeant's old company commander.* Further, my guess is that it was written around 1919 (plus or minus 5 years). I trust you will agree that it well deserves this month's space From the Archives.

The Glass Menagerie Heisey Company

Shirley Dunbar, photos by Everet Dunbar

Reprinted courtesy of the Antique Trader, August 14, 1996

When the controversial playwright Tennessee Williams published The Glass Menagerie in 1944, little did he know that some years later, when Warner Brothers distributed a film by the same name, that the artistry and skills of the glass makers of the A.H. Heisey and Company would be featured along with the fictional Wingfield family of St. Louis, Missouri. Williams would never have guessed that the art form of great American glass would come to life, featuring the glass menagerie of his key character, Laura: the fatherless, physically challenged, reclusive, Wingfield daughter who lived in a world of old phonograph records and little glass animals.

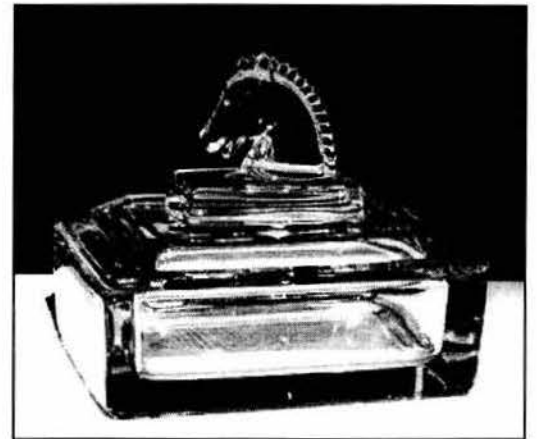

The "little glass animals" used in the film were made by and purchased from the A.H. Heisey and Company of Newark, Ohio. This glass company featured handwrought crystal pieces that exemplified a high quality contemporary art form that was often featured along with such company names as Tiffany and Steuben, and such equally exquisite glass forms as Amberina and Burmese.

Founded in 1896, the company has a rich history in the development of handmade glassware. It was never machine made. Heisey played a key role in the production of glass making in this country and has become an integral part of our Industrial American heritage. The company's refusal to move to machine-made glassware, when all other companies in the industry had done so, was partly responsible for its demise in 1957.

According to Kay and Stanton Darling, who extensively researched this company in the early 1970's, the last years of the Heisey industry were plagued by an inability to find and train apprentices in this skilled work and match the pay of the other industries. By the early 1950's, all of the other glass companies in the United States had turned to machine-made glass, which lacked artistry, but was cheaper to produce and seemed to serve the needs of the buying public.

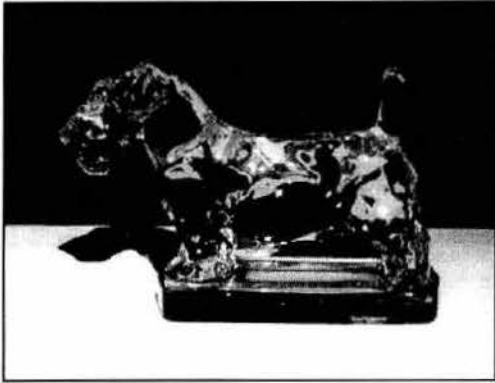

Perhaps the most difficult to produce, and the items which required the most skill, were the many glass animals that were mold blown and hand finished. Heisey began experimenting with producing glass animals in 1935 with the horsehead bookends. These were popular items with the public and were quickly in demand from eager collectors of fine crystal.

Most of the animals were designed by Royal Hickman, a glass designer who first designed for Kosta Glasbruk of Sweden. When Hickman began to design for Heisey during World War I, there was already one animal in production: the Horsehead Bookend.

Horsehead Bookend

Horsehead Cigarette Box

According to Dick Marsh, an expert on the Heisey animals, and from archives at the National Heisey Glass Museum in Newark, Ohio, the bookend is usually found in crystal, although it can be found frosted. Frosting, or finishing the animal with an acid etch, was usually done on animals that were somehow flawed in the finishing process. Crystal animals show defects clearly and workers did not like to make them. It was too difficult to remove the animals from the molds and often the defects were quickly apparent in the clear crystal glass.

Scotty Dog

The horsehead bookend has been found in amber, and both amber and frosted are considered to be rare. It is a solid piece approximately 6 7/8-inches tall, 6-inches from nose to back of the mane and 2 5/8-inches across the solid base. Seldom is the "Diamond H" found on this item, but when it does occur, it is found midway on the neck, just above the base. Clarence Vogel, in book four, indicates that the bookends were designed by T. Clarence Heisey around 1935. This item, along with the Tropical Fish piece and the Rearing Horse Bookends, had never been reproduced, until 1994 when, as a fund-raiser, the Tropical Fish piece was reproduced by Dalzell-Viking in a lavender ice color for the Heisey Collectors of America, Inc.

There was a "stable" of horses produced by the Heisey Company. Besides the horsehead bookend, serious collectors with a sharp eye can find a plug horse, a show horse, filly horses, three ponies in various positions, a horsehead cigarette box in two sizes, the top of a cocktail shaker, a Clydesdale and flying mare.

There were dogs, too: a Scotty and an Airedale, and birds like geese, sparrows, mallards, pigeons, pheasants, swans and cygnets. Later, the "barnyard" group was developed which included the rooster vase, the fighting rooster, sow and piglets, the bull and the rabbits. There was a "jungle" group with giraffe's in two positions, a gazelle, tiger paperweights, gazelles and elephants in three sizes. The fish series offered bookends, fish bowls, the tropical fish piece, candlesticks and a match holder. The glass menagerie became a delight. Each year, there was something new and elegant to add to the collection.

Fighting Rooster

The glass menagerie grew in later years to include other collector items such as goblets with animal stems, stoppers for cocktail shakers, handles on mugs, flower frogs, ash trays, containers, finials and decanters.

Advertising was extensive. Heisey was the first glass company to start a national advertising program. Besides having their own section in major department stores such as Macy's, Marshall Fields, Jordan and Marsh, Hudsons, Lazarus, Woodward and Lothrop, John Wanamaker's and Bullocks. There were ads that included magazines such as the Woman's Home Companion, Good Housekeeping, House and Garden and House Beautiful, and media extension to the Heisey-sponsored radio station WAIU from the AIU Tower in Columbus, Ohio. The menagerie and other Heisey glassware products became well established in both the commercial industry and in the art world for originality in design and decoration.

Beginning in 1958 when the Imperial Glass Company bought out the Heisey molds, Imperial began to reproduce many of the original Heisey animals in the Heisey molds. This was done until Imperial went out of business in 1984.

For the next year, after the demise of Imperial, the Heisey molds went unused until 1985 when the Heisey Collectors of America, Inc. raised $229,150 to buy back from Consolidated Colony—the holding company that assets from Imperial were awarded to when Imperial went into bankruptcy—all of the original Heisey molds.

Today, these molds are being used by other glass companies at the discretion of and under contract to the Heisey Collectors of America, Inc. to continue to raise funds to support the museum in Newark, Ohio, which they founded in 1974, and which contains a full collection of all of the animals produced by both Heisey and Imperial in their respective colors.

Colors for the original Heisey animals were a deep amber named Sultana, a light amber named Honey Amber and a Cobalt Blue. Colors for the Imperial made animals, or the so-called Imperial colors were: amber, antique blue, black, caramel slag, charcoal, crystal, emerald green, fern green, heather, horizon blue (light blue), Imperial jade, meadow green, milk glass, nut brown, pink, ruby, salmon, sunshine yellow, ultra blue (dark) and Verde green. The caramel slag pieces which began to appear in the 1950's, ranged from a caramel gray to various shades of browns and ambers. Imperial also made animals that were iridized and took on a metallic rainbow appearance often referred to as a "carnival glass" finish. However, many of the animals were made by Imperial in crystal.

The original animals made by the A.H. Heisey and Company were made in several colors as well as crystal, but none of the reproductions, either from Imperial, or from other glass companies, have ever been made in the original Heisey colors. However, the Sultana color, made by Heisey, and the Amber color, made by Imperial, is difficult to separate. The Honey Amber was also called the Harvey Amber as the Fred Harvey Restaurants used table services in this color. These items, if correctly identified, are highly desirable collectors items.

Goose, wings up

The market for glass menagerie items has grown immensely in the past 10 years and prices have risen dramatically. Both the original Heisey animals and those reproduced in Heisey molds by Imperial bring very high prices. About 10 years ago, a piece made by the Imperial Company brought considerable less than the original, but today it seems to make no difference in the price if the piece is in crystal.

Many of the Imperial pieces are also marked with the Heisey "H", because they were made in the original molds, and the trademark was sold to Imperial along with the molds. Many of the pieces cannot be found at all, but when found, the prices for both are about the same. However, when an Imperial animal in the Imperial color appears, the price is considerable lower than for an original animal made by the Heisey Company in an original Heisey color.

But, the market for the Imperial animals in the colors and in "slag" is rapidly growing and collectors are beginning to pay exceedingly higher prices for these items than in the past, as verified by the Sam Schnaidt auctions of these items over the past five years (held in Newark, Ohio several times a year).

For 10 years, Imperial continued to use the Heisey trademark which they purchased with the molds. Beginning in 1968, Imperial discontinued the use of the “Diamond H” trademark and the “Imperial IG” trademark was used on marked animals until 1973, but not all pieces were marked. From 1981 until 1985, the ALIG trademark was used on a few pieces which they marked NI (New Imperial). This mark was used in 1983-1984 until Imperial went into Chapter 7 bankruptcy in 1984.

While it is not possible to cover all the items in the glass menagerie of the A.H. Heisey and Company, it is possible to identify the animals that are most likely to be found in the secondary marketplace. Such items from the “horse” category would be the three ponies, horsehead cigarette boxes and the bookends. Other items in this category are rare and, if found, very expensive. Perhaps the most sought after animal in this category is the flying mare in amber.

Fish Bookends

Giraffe

It must be remembered that Imperial also made this item in amber as well, but all these items were marked with either the ALIG or the NI stamp. Only the flying mare made in crystal by Imperial was marked with the Diamond H. This was done between the years of 1964 through 1967 and, according to inventory records from that time period, only 12 were made. Markings can be found in one of two places: left side of base under the flanks or 1 3/4” from the bottom on the right side near the front.

In the bird category, it is most difficult to locate the wings-down goose as it was easily broken both in manufacture and when owned; therefore, not many are available. The ringneck pheasant is also easily found as are the three mallards. The pouter pigeon is a rarity. Imperial made 25 pouter pigeons between 1964-1967, in crystal and all were marked with the Diamond H. The mark is located 1/2” from the bottom on the left side in front of the tail feathers.

The “jungle” and “barnyard” groups are almost all in the rare category. The exception to this is the fighting rooster and the rooster vase which seem to be around in abundance. One rarely sees offered for sale either of the giraffes, tiger paperweight in crystal, any of the three elephants or the gazelle. Neither will you easily find originals of the sow and piglets, rabbit paper weight or the bull.

In an effort to prevent reproductions of Heisey glassware, the Heisey Collectors of America, Inc., purchased all the animal molds (as well as all the Heisey molds owned by Imperial—except for the Old Williamsburg line) in 1984 when Imperial went out of business. This organization owns a first-class museum in Newark, Ohio, and controls the manufacture and distribution of any reissues, or replica’s, from these molds offered to the public.

None of the replica’s of the animals have been made in crystal or any of the original Heisey colors. To date, there have been two issues of Heisey animals reproduced in a series. The first series, made in 1992, was a group of 12 animals made by Fenton in a color called “Rosalene”—a mixture of white and pink in opaque. There were 450 of this series made; the second series was made by Dalzell-Viking in 1993, also 12 in the series, in a color called “Lavender Ice.” There were 450 of this series made. Some single “seconds” were frosted and later sold in the Heisey Museum. But, the majority of both issues were sold to club members as a numbered series of 12 animals. Today, these issues are available on the secondary market only.

Rooster Vase

Since 1995, a numbered issue of a single rare Heisey animal is replicated and offered to club members either by lottery or by a first-come, first-served basis to the more than 3,000 Heisey members who belong to 35 club groups around the country. This years offering was the Flying Mare in the Cobalt color of which 260 pre-sold items went at $400. Each were produced by Dalzell-Viking. All “seconds” of this issue were destroyed and none will appear on the commercial market as a first issue unless sold by the original owner.

While Laura Wingfield might not have known that so many glass animals existed in the A.H. Heisey menagerie, after the debut of the Tennessee Williams play and movie, the American public embraced the art form for several decades.

Today, there has been a renewed interest in collecting glass animals. For collectors of Heisey glassware, the quest for the elusive original glass animals, as well as the replica's made by Imperial, Fenton and Dalzell-Viking continues, but their rarity precludes that all interested members can effectively build their own glass menageries.

Large Elephant

For those of us who “live in a world for little glass ornaments,” the fun of collecting, searching and finding those elusive Heisey animals that make up the menagerie will probably continue well into the 21st century and beyond! ♦

How Sweet It Is—The Gorham Syrup Follow-up

Jim Earnshaw

Thanks so much—there was quite a bit of interest in my article, How Sweet It Is—The Mysterious Gorham Syrup (Heisey News, June 1996, page 12). The display in the museum created a lot of inquiry and a source of visual knowledge to many of you. I am surprised that so little was known and so much interest was created. Those of you with these “unknown” #411 Tudor syrups or sugars sitting on your shelves are much more knowledgeable than you were before.

No. 411 Tudor appeared at the convention. Many thanked us and reported possession, especially in the Crystal. None in Moongleam, Sahara or Flamingo. Still a mystery on the Gorham sugar shaker is the pourer or top—none were reported. Inquiry is still unanswered from the Gorham Silver Factory. Patience and “red tape” are the possible answers.

If any of you have any information, please send it to us via the National Heisey Glass Museum. Thanks again, your interest helps to make it easier to write more into these articles.

Thanks too, to those of you who made inquiry about my stroke and recovery. Every day is a better one.

Also, our thanks to Neila and Tom Bredehoff for supplying copies of a 1933 and 1934 salesman’s catalog. We are most grateful.

The next article will be about a Heisey look-a-like syrup, the #372. ♦

Liaison Relations—Make It Take It Day at the Studio

Molly Kaspar

Sketch of an early glass factory.

Enroll now in the first glass class at the HCA Studio!

Call Molly Kaspar at (614) 345-2932 or write to 169 West Church St., Newark, Ohio 43055. If you can't make it to the first class, let me know if you're interested in participating at another time!

Like A.H. Heisey and Company glassware, paperweights hold a mystique among collectors everywhere. Their exact origin remains disputed; some believe manufacture began as early as the 1820's in Murano, Italy while others agree on the 1840's. Regardless, both groups acknowledge that glass paperweights gained popularity in late 1840's Europe, due primarily to famous glassmakers such as Baccarat, Saint-Louis and Clichy of France and Venetian glassmakers including Venezia-Murano and Salviati.

The novelty of paperweights first took hold with the bourgeoisie in France. It was a pivotal time in history due to technological and industrial innovations. Stationery shops, desiring to bolster their sales of paper, began outfitting their stores with all manner of peripheral novelties. These included inkwells, penholders, wax letter seals, and more importantly, paperweights.¹ Popularity of glass paperweights continued to grow, eventually moving away from Europe via foreign immigrants to glassmakers in the United States.

Why am I giving you a brief synopsis on the history of paperweights you ask? Well, it's time to do your homework if you intend to enroll in the first HCA Glass Studio paperweight making class! You make it, you take it! This is the first of many classes to be held at the studio. A date is set for Sunday December 8, the day after the Board Meeting and Holiday Dinner. I chose this day in particular for the first class because it allows our out of town members the opportunity to participate.

Mark your calendars for December 8 and save a few hours to spend time in the studio. Each class size is limited to just 7 to 10 students; more than one class will be held on Sunday (class times yet to be determined). I'll be assisting your instructor who will guide you through the glassmaking process, introducing you to glass, demonstrating different techniques and then allowing you to create your own treasure.

The cost is $35 per person; this includes your instruction fee and supplies, and anything you make to take home with you. All profit from classes goes into the HCA Studio operating fund. Registration is required—class size is very limited! More classes will be held (if I have interested students!) after Christmas. Please contact Molly Kaspar at the museum (614-345-2932) or write for further details and to register for the December 8 class. ♦

Questions And Answers

Molly Kaspar

Collector in Conway, Arkansas seeks information:

Ques: I have looked in a number of references and have been unable to find anything useful regarding my Heisey lamp. Please examine the photo. This Heisey prism lamp has been in our family for years. My grandmother was an Iowa minister's wife; she recalls receiving this lamp as a gift from one of her husbands churches in approximately 1910.

The lamp is 19-inches high with a 6-sided base that is 6-inches across. Cut a basketball in half and you have the approximate size of the globe. The design on the globe consists of a "cut" diamond pattern joined by a "cut" indentation (beveled?). When you take the globe off, you can see the "Diamond H" Heisey marks; one on each side of the upper stem.

Could you provide further information regarding this piece, or resources I could study?

Ans: From your description and photograph we determined you indeed have a Heisey electro-portable lamp, pattern #207 Patrician with "C" prisms. The 11-inch #5 candlestick was modified to create the design for the lamp. The cutting on the shade appears to be Heisey's #1 Lance cutting. This particular piece was in production from roughly 1915 through 1922, so your Grandmother's date of 1910 is nearly correct.

You may find references to the lamp in Heisey Candlesticks, Candelabra and Lamps by Tom Felt and Bob O'Grady, as well as Heisey Salesman Catalog No. 76, both available in the Museum Shop.

Heisey owner in Lake City, Florida inquires:

Ques: I am not a "collector" of Heisey glass although I do have a couple of pieces. I recently acquired a vase which I believe is Heisey but have not been able to find out anything about it. I am hoping that perhaps you could help.

The vase is Crystal and stands about 14-inches high, it is 4-inches across the base and the base has an eight pointed "starburst" pattern on the bottom with an H in a diamond. Is it Heisey? Is it very old? Does it have any value, outside of being a very pretty vase?

Ans: Your glassware in question definitely was produced by A.H. Heisey and Company. The piece in question is from pattern line #338, a No. 11 flower vase. Vases in this particular pattern range in size from 13½-inches to over 16-inches, and were produced by the company in the early 1900's. Unfortunately, I cannot give you a monetary value on the piece, but I can reassure you that you do have a very pretty vase! ♦

Club Notes

Tri-State Heisey Club #43 Pat Rohrer

The August meeting was held at the home of Pat and Bernie Rohrer in Auburn, Indiana. Fourteen members and three guests were present for the carry-in dinner.

A letter was read thanking the club for the sizable contribution to the endowment fund. Photographs were shown of the beautiful displays at the convention by Janet Maxwell.

The Allen Michigan Antique Show held during Memorial Day weekend was a big success again this year with plans to do it again next year.

A very interesting program was presented on Heisey advertising photographs from the first in 1896 to the last in 1953, as they appeared in household magazines. Bob and Joan McElheney donated two dishes that had contained food for the dinner to be auctioned off as a surprise at the end of the meeting. Clever idea! The next meeting will be in November at the home of Tom and Linda Bischoff in Texas, Ohio. ♦

Hoosier Heisey Club #45 Donna Schellenberger

October and November events were planned at the August 17th meeting of the Hoosier Heisey Club. Members met at the Warren Library, Indianapolis, with President Tom Taylor presiding. Secretary and Treasurer reports were presented. Our donation to HCA at the annual meeting was $810.00 along with a $25.00 donation to the Hospitality Committee.

The October activity will be centered around a display case filled with beautiful Heisey glass. This display will be at the Warren Library under the direction of Don Rabourn. Thanks, Don, for your efforts in promoting Heisey and our club. Informative literature will be available.

Our next meeting will be November 16 at 2 p.m. The business meeting will be followed by a holiday dinner. Interest in the dinner should be sent to Bill Phillips by November 9. The address is: 4215 Wanamaker Drive, Indianapolis, Indiana 46239.

Officers for 1997 were chosen. They are: President—Donna Schellenberger, Vice President—Sonnie Taylor, Secretary—Barb Rosenberger, Treasurer—Mike Rosenberger.

A presentation on decanters and water bottles was expertly presented by Mike Rosenberger. The feature color was Hawthorne, with many beautiful pieces shown. The ice cream social featured, of course, ice cream, toppings, Angel food cake and soft drinks.

See our October display and come to our November 16th meeting, both of which will be at the Warren Library located off I-70, Post Road exit, Indianapolis. ♦

North Carolina Heisey Study Group #38 Michele Scott

The North Carolina Heisey Study Group met at the lovely home of Bob and Marcia Ellis in West End on September 14. We had seventeen members and one guest present. After lunch at the club house, we were surprised and treated to cake with a beautiful Diamond H decoration.

The program was the viewing of the ID Breakfast tape from the Heisey Centennial Convention. This was both educational and interesting. A slate of officers for 1997 was selected.

Show and Tell was a bonanza. Items included a rose bowl in Sunburst and Pillows, a pair of Fighting Roosters from a yard sale, a covered Pillows sugar, a Waverly footed covered candy with Sea Horse handles and Orchid etch, a Cobel cocktail shaker with Tally Ho etch and Rooster stopper, a pair of 1-lite Ridgeleigh candelabrum with "A" prisms, a Puntly and Diamond 10" vase, a Glenford Hawthorne bar glass with checker optic, Crystal Empress 3-toed candlesticks, Flamingo and Sahara Swan handled candlesticks...The list goes on—as you can see, our members have been on the hunt!

The NCHSG thanks all Heisey collectors and friends who helped make our shirt sale such a success. The next meeting will be held in November in Greensboro. ♦
